—W. D. O'Conner's contribution to the Bacon-Shakespeare controversy in Hamlet's Note Book, is by all odds the most readable treatise yet written upon this theme. Mr. O'Conner has adopted the theory that Bacon wrote the plays attributed to Shakespeare, and puts the argument into a shape that will entertain if it will not convince every reader. Richard Grant White will turn in his grave when he finds how roughly he is handled for his ungentlemanly treatment of Miss Pott. Published by Houghton, Mifflin & Co.

Wanted

A position to assist with housework and plain sewing in a small family. Wages not so much as a good home.
Address, Mrs. M. Ellsworth, Post Office Carson City, Nevada.

—For the best horse liniment now in the market go to Doc. Benton. It is his own make, and warranted to beat all the heavy brands.

ALL SORTS.

—Wizard Oil at Geo. Thaxter's.

—Four polygamists were sentenced to imprisonment and a fine, Thursday, by the Third District Court, Utah.

—Sproule under sentence of death at Victoria, has been reprieved until the 20th inst.

—Remember that Bella Moore in a "Mountain Pink" will appear at the Opera House, Tuesday evening, October 5th.

—The Crow case was argued in the District Court yesterday afternoon, and last evening. The argument was not finished as the APPEAL went to press.

—The special State Fair train to Reno and return will be run as usual this year, commencing Tuesday October 5th, continuing through the week.

Fare for the round trip, $1 50, children under twelve years, half price.

—The match between the American yacht Sachem and English cutter Miranda over the 20 mile course was won by the former. The wind was strong. The Miranda was for a time a long distance in the lead, but the Sachem sailed steadily and won the race.

—My daughter has taken the medicine faithfully according to directions, and her health and spirits are perfect. The humor is all gone from her face. I wish every anxious mother might know what a blessing Ayer's Sarsaparilla is in such cases.

—There will be preaching in the Presbyterian Church this morning at 11 A. M., and a praise service at 7 P. M. In addition to the singing of anthems and hymns, short addresses will be made upon the history of the author, the composition of the hymn, and its use. All are cordially invited.

—The estate of the late John W. Garret of Baltimore amounted to much more than had been supposed. Current opinion places the fortunes of his two sons and his daughter at from $6,000,000 to $10,000,000 apiece. The daughter is unmarried, and is said in Baltimore to be the wealthiest single woman in the country.

—Sufferer from the effects of quinine, used as a remedy for chills and fever, will appreciate Ayer's Ague Cure, a powerful tonic bitter, composed wholly of vegetable substances, without a particle of any noxious drug. Its action is peculiar, prompt and powerful, breaking up the chill, curing the fever, and expelling the poison from the system, yet leaving no harmful or unpleasant effect upon the patient.

—The crooked cashier Gould of Portland Me., is charged with only one of the numerous embezzlements which he committed. This leniency is probably due to the eminently respectable character of the accused man, but it puts a premium on hypocrisy, and is an unjust discrimination against the criminals who do not join churches and charitable organizations for the sake of carrying on more successfully their illicit operations.

—Connecticut, the land of steady habits has experienced another severe shock in the startling defalcation of G. M. Bartholomew President of the Charter Oak Insurance Company whose ascertained shortage is $127,000 and pecuniary responsibilities as represented by paper held by banks and individuals, are said to aggregate over $2,000,000. The ex-President of the Charter Oak has transferred his domicile from Hartford to Montreal.

—The report telegraphed from New York that the Saratoga undertaker who laid out General Grant is still unpaid proves to be a falsehood. Fred Grant says flatly that the bill was included in the New York undertaker's account and was paid, because he audited the account. The action of the undertaker firm in trying to collect a bill which was repudiated at the time it was first presented is in very bad taste, while Editor Dana's offer to pay it puts the Grant executors in a disagreeable as well as a false light.

ENFORCED THE RULE.

How Hank Davis Made Stanford Fangle.

Some years ago when Hank Davis, now candidate for Lieutenant Governor first went on the C. P. as a conductor he came through one day when Leland Stanford was on the train. He didn't ask Stanford for his pass and when he came through the car again Stanford stopped him with:

"Did you look at my pass yet?" Hank said that he knew of course the President of the Road was all right.

"Every one must show a pass or a ticket, these are the unalterable rules."

"From this on I will be more careful."

"See that you remember."

"By the way Mr. Stanford I might as well see your pass now."

Mr. Stanford felt in his vest pocket, then in his coat pocket, and then his brow grew clouded, then he got red in the face.

He had lost his pass.

"Hurry up please Mr. Stanford."

"Guess I'll have to pay."

"No guess about it you'll have to."

Mr. Stanford pulled a check out of his pocket.

"Checks don't go. It takes hard money on this road. If you can't raise the money you can get off at Wells."

Stanford had nothing but checks and he finally had to go into the next sleeper and borrowed the required amount of Steve Gaige.

The Boy Let It Out.

A little incident happened the other day which is too good to keep out of print.

A prominent anti-Chinese howler invited a friend to dinner and the Chinese question came up.

"This fair land," said the host, "will never prosper until it is wrested from the grasp of the Mongolian slave. I have tried white and I have tried Chinese labor, and I would no more have a Chinaman in my employ than I would cut off my right arm."

"Why dad," cried out a youngster at the table, "you said yesterday you wished you had Ah Chuck back as he was worth a dozen Bids."

"Will you have some sweetmeats my son?"

"Guess not; you said the preserves wasn't worth a cent since the Chinamen left."

"Yes Mister, papa said he wouldn't have the Chinamen back, though because—"

"Hush my child, have some pie little one," broke in the father.

"Because you was goin' to run for office. Yes I'll take some pie please."

The father turned red, the visitor gave a sly chuckle and the Chinese question was dropped for the meal. When this man runs for office this Fall some further notice will be made of his candidacy.

Won his Bet and Sold his Skunk.

A day or two since one of those animals of the genus "Mephitis"—commonly called the skunk—was observed to make his way into the henery of one of our citizens. It was proposed by one or two individuals to shoot the carnivorous marauder of the hen roost, and while the subject was under contemplation along came Pat. Bell, the old Humboldt trapper, who offered to bet six dollars that he would go into the chicken house, capture the skunk, and take him through the streets without the animal emitting his noxious effluvia. The bet was taken, and Mr. Bell armed himself with a piece of baling-rope, entered the chicken house, passed the rope over the skunk's head and brought him forth triumphantly. It was a large specimen of the Mephitis family, some three feet from tip to tip. Mr. Bell took him through the street, followed by a concourse of boys, and as far as any "smell" was concerned everything was serene. He took the animal to Chinatown and disposed of him to an eminent Celestial disciple of Esculapius, the Chinese medical faculty prizing the skunk for its supposed highly medical qualities. Pat won his bet and sold his skunk.

A Newspaper Sued For Libel.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 30.—The Times editorially this morning published a libelous article against Walter S. Moore, candidate for Secretary of State, and Mr. Moore has sued for $500,000. James F. Bicknell, Stephen M. White, Thos. Fitch and Henry Edgerton are the plaintiff attorneys. Moore's attorneys request that the Court fix the date of trial as early as possible so that the case can be decided before the election.

—It is announced in St. Louis that the Knights of Labor in the West have decided to have no more strikes, and to adhere to the policy of arbitration henceforth. This is wise. Strikes have inflicted on the country an annual loss of millions of dollars, and have been of little benefit to anybody. Arbitration is the best means of settling all difficulties that arise between capital and labor.

Short-Horn Cattle in Nevada.

One of our Nevada subscribers, says the Live Stock Journal, W. J. Marsh, in a letter to the Register, Inyo, Cal., gives his experience with some Short-horn steers as follows:

There is a general feeling among farmers and stockmen that to pay more than $50 for a steer is the prelude to financial ruin. They go on supplying three-year old beef steers to the butchers that weigh 500lbs., and are elated if a few reach 550lbs., and fail to see that by the expenditure of $200 to $300 for a steer that is purely bred, and worth something to their herds, they could sell two-year-olds as heavy as their three-year-olds now average, saving a year in time, and the cost of keeping and all attendant risks for a year. I recently sold thirty beef steers, all three-year-olds but six, which were four-year-olds. Among them was one-half Short-horn steer, three years old, and in no way superior to the average Short-horn steer, that weighed alive, after driving twenty-six miles in one day, 1,284lbs. The other twenty-nine made an average live weight of 1,198lbs., and dressed only 50 per cent. of live weight. He dressed 80 lbs more than the best four-year-old, and 206 lbs more than the twenty-nine head averaged. This steer ranged in the mountains with the others and fed with them, showing his contempt for the stale and false notion that Short-horns cannot rustle for a living, and proving their ability to out-grow other animals under equal conditions. All this is simply the result of using a pure Short-horn sire. This steer did not cost me any more than the others, and on the butcher's block brought me over $15 more than they did. Now I would like to ask such of your readers as think they cannot afford to buy thoroughbred sires, how many half-bred Short horn steers it will take to pay for even a $500 bull, out of the extra pounds of meat they will dress over and above the animals they are now raising? The first forty steers raised will cover the price. When there are forty steers there will be forty heifers that will be worth $2 50 a head more than their mothers as a foundation for further improvements. To all intents the sire is half the herd in determining the force for good or evil within it. No breeder of cattle can afford to use a common sire. To do so is a bad type of economy—a penny wise and pound foolish practice. The man who does not improve his stock will get left. Breed from the best forever, which is the only road to success.

The Miner's Friend.

"I tell you" said an enthusiastic Democrat "Jewett Adams is going to run again. He'll get the solid vote of the Virginia miners. He's the miner's friend."

"If he's the miner's friend why didn't he pay more than $50 a month to his miners in Nye county? Eh?"

"What's that?"

"You know that he never paid miner's wages, don't you?"

"Oh, that Nye County racket don't count, he's smoothed it all over with the boys in Virginia City and they won't believe anything but that he's their friend."

"Have they forgotten that C. C. Stevenson has paid over three million in miner's wages?"

"Oh, those fellows that Stevenson paid so much money to are all gone now, ye see."

"But those fellows that Adams hired in Nye county are not all gone yet and they will be on deck before this campaign is over."
